2. EDUCATIONAL AIMS OF PROGRAMME

The BSc Nursing Studies aims to develop graduate nurses who are able to deliver person-centred, safe and effective care, working with other professions and agencies to address people's needs in an ever-changing and complex health care environment. At the point of registration nurses should be skilled practitioners able to deliver competent, safe, effective and compassionate care for people of all cultures, backgrounds and beliefs. The programme will prepare students to demonstrate competence and confidence in achieving the NMC (2018) standards ensuring that they can:

- Utilise a broad range of skills, attitudes and behaviours, and integrate a broad knowledge base, operating as thoughtful, autonomous, flexible and creative practitioners as they maintain and promote the health and wellbeing of individuals, families, communities and populations across the lifespan.
- Seek out every opportunity to practice safe, high quality, empathic, person centred care, exhibiting the necessary values, qualities and skills, and utilising reflective practice and intelligent kindness to underpin practice.
- Assess, plan, implement, deliver and evaluate care in any healthcare setting, demonstrating professional competence and accountability, developing a caring, therapeutic relationship, based on values such as dignity and respect.
- Coordinate care with a range of patients, clients, service users and their families from all cultures, backgrounds and beliefs, situated at different points of the spectrum of complexity.
- Empower people, communities and populations to exercise choice, take control of their own health and support them in managing their own care
- Recognise the national and global and environmental context of nursing practice within 21st century health and social care.
- Act as independent, resilient learners, exercising rigorous and independent thinking, and an appreciation of the art and science of nursing, while demonstrating an ability to critically analyse and apply best evidence to nursing practice.
- Have emotional intelligence and resilience to manage their own personal health and wellbeing
- Have a responsibility for learning with service users, educators and their peers and engage with education as an active, reflexive, lifelong process.
- Develop personal, professional and academic competence and abilities, clinical reasoning and decision-making skills to enable them to undertake ethical and non-discriminatory nursing practice.

- Develop a professional identity in order to make a positive contribution to working in partnership within an interprofessional context, to lead, delegate, supervise, challenge, improve and commission healthcare delivery.
- Operate as change agents within a variety of care settings, developing leadership qualities, and an ability to lead quality improvement and service development to improve patient experiences and outcomes as agreed at local and national levels.

3. LEARNING OUTCOMES

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding, skills, qualities and other attributes in the following areas:
